

Ultrasound-guided procedures in Rheumatology: fluid aspirations, injections, biopsies of joint and periarticular MSK structures

An intensive and interactive live course

Rome, 5 December 2026

Course Chair: Prof. Annamaria Iagnocco

Course Presentation

The Course on Ultrasound-Guided Procedures in Rheumatology is an intensive and highly interactive live course focusing on the indications and limitations of local procedures in Rheumatic and Musculoskeletal Diseases (RMDs). It provides a comprehensive educational experience on when and how to perform fluid aspirations, drug injections, and synovial biopsies at the level of joints and periarticular musculoskeletal structures involved across the wide spectrum of RMDs, including rheumatoid arthritis, psoriatic arthritis and spondyloarthritis, crystal-induced diseases, osteoarthritis, and locoregional pain syndromes.

The course is highly interactive and combines lectures (30%) with workshops (70%), offering hands-on training in ultrasound-guided procedures. Sessions are led by a highly qualified faculty, who will also provide practical instruction on both the technical execution of procedures and the interpretation of findings.

Participants will be divided into small groups to ensure optimal learning and interaction.
